Discover Croatia’s most popular summer destinations
Croatia: Intro

Croatia is a small but diverse country, stretching between the Mediterranean and continental regions of Southeastern Europe. This mini guide takes you to the most popular summer destinations in Croatia, including Dubrovnik, Split, Hvar Island and Pula. The capital of Croatia is Zagreb, and the currency is Croatian Kuna. Croatia entered the European Union in 2013.
Chapter 2

Dubrovnik – “pearl of the Adriatic”

“NON BENE PRO TOTO LIBERTAS VENDITUR AURO” – Freedom is not sold for all gold in the world

This Latin inscription can be found above the entrance into the Lovrijenac Fort in Dubrovnik. Freedom was and still is, the leitmotif of the city of Dubrovnik and its inhabitants.

Located right at the entrance to the Adriatic Sea, Dubrovnik was an important transit point between the East and the West, especially in the Medieval times when the New World had not been discovered yet. The Mediterranean was, therefore, where all important and rich harbours flourished, transferring goods from East to the West.

Merchants from the Medieval Republic of Dubrovnik travelled freely wherever they wanted and the city developed a respectable fleet that travelled all over the world. While travelling, Dubrovnik merchants weren’t interested in conquering lands they’d been to, but were sailing under a white flag and were only interested in trading. The white flag contained a word in Latin: “Libertas”, which means freedom.
The walls of Dubrovnik are the most recognisable symbol of the city, making tiny Croatia well-known all over the world. The walls are 1940 meters long, up to 6 meters wide and 25 meters high. Today a wonderful open-air museum, the walls were originally built to defend the city and the harbour from foreign threat. Tourists enjoy fantastic views over the Adriatic from five different fortresses and sixteen towers and bastions. One of the fortresses, the St Lovrijenac Fort, is often called „Gibraltar of Dubrovnik”.

Split is the second largest city in Croatia and one of the oldest settlements in the Adriatic. The Ancient Palace in its centre, built by the Roman Emperor Diocletian, is a real masterpiece of Ancient architecture and a top place to visit. Relatively easy to get around, Split makes a perfect destination for your city break or a family holiday.

From Split it is easy to visit neighbouring towns such as Solin and Trogir, or islands of Hvar, Brač and Vis. Although a buzzing urban centre, Split boasts many great beaches, the most popular among them being the Bačvice Beach.
The wonderful Diocletian's Palace in Split was built around 300 AD near Salona, a capital of the Roman province of Dalmatia. The Emperor built it as his retirement home.

Diocletian’s Palace is one of the best preserved monuments of Roman architecture in the world and was added to the UNESCO list of World Heritage Sites in 1979. The Palace was a combination of a luxury villa – summer house and a Roman military camp (castrum), divided into four parts with two main streets. Over time, inhabitants of Split modified parts of the palace but the outlines of the Emperor’s original palace are still very visible.
What to do in Split?

Croatian food is a result of the country’s unique historical development. Traces of regional culinary influences can be seen (and tasted) in the modern Croatian kitchen, and they vary from region to region – for example, you’ll find significantly different food on the Croatian islands than in Slavonia.

In Dalmatia the most popular food is – guess what – fish! Dalmatian cuisine is heavily influenced by Italian and generally Mediterranean cuisine. The fresh fish from the Adriatic Sea is usually served with swiss chard and potatoes.
• Pašticada is the traditional Dalmatian meat dish, usually served with a side of home-made gnocchi or pasta. It is a stewed beef dish cooked with prunes, nutmeg, bacon, wine and other ingredients for up to 6 hours.

• Roasted lamb under the bell (bell is usually called peka) is very popular in mountainous and coastal parts of Croatia. The meat and potatoes are placed in a baking pan, covered with large clay or metal bell. The dish is then placed in the oven and covered with lots of hot coals, so that it can slowly cook in its own juices.

• Rožata is a delicious custard dessert from Dubrovnik region, similar to crème brûlée. It was named after the special type of rose liqueur, which gives the cake its special aroma.
